

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

I am pretty tired of all the comments about the liberal media and their distortions of the news. This is only one of many ways that the media proves it is neither liberal or fair! If the FCC does not act, I'd like to know why. They are supposed to be non-partisan!
